Pacific Linguistic Out of Print Publications 1963-2013

The archiving of Pacific Linguistics out of print books as PDF files has nearly been completed, with the exception of the language atlases and a couple of other books which are NOT AVAILABLE.

PDF files can be emailed if they are small enough (most are not). Files are usually sent via Dropbox, a free large file sharing facility.

C-148	The Interface between Syntax and Discourse in Korafe: A Papuan Language of Papua New Guinea Farr, Cynthia J.M., This volume presents an overview of the morphological and syntactic structures of Korafe, a Papuan language spoken in the Oro Province of Papua New Guinea. Its focus is on the structure and functions of three types of complex constructions in sentences and discourse: (1) serial verb constructions (SVCs), (2) switch reference constructions (SRCs), and (3) co-ranking constructions. Attention is also given to defining information units that segment SRCs and co-ranking structures, and to examining information packaging in discourse. Keywords: medial verb, final verb, serial verb constructions (SVCs), switch-reference constructions (SRCs), co-ranking constructions (CRSs), apparently anomalous switch-reference, thematic clause chain units (TCCUs or information blocks), speech formulas, chaining paragraphs, thematic paragraphs, scripts. 1999 ISBN 085883 499 5 xx + 459pp

Given that Crowley was working with a small group of elderly speakers, it is likely that this account will represent the final word on this language. Until the 1970s, the languages of southern Vanuatu represented one of the least-known groupings of Oceanic languages, but descriptive work in the last two decades has resulted in this being one of the more comprehensively described groupings, with this description filling one of the remaining gaps in our knowledge. 1999 ISBN 085883 520 7 xiii + 226pp (maps)

D-93	Grammatical relations in Bahasa Indonesia Vamarasi, Marit This is an analysis of the sentential syntax of Bahasa Indonesia from the theoretical perspective of Relational Grammar. Separate chapters deal with intransitive verbs and the Unaccusative Hypothesis, advancements to subject (passive), advancements to direct object, ke- -an adversatives and clause union, ascensions, and equi constructions. The syntactic functions of the affixes di-, meN-, -i, -kan, per- -an, peN- -an, and ke- -an are all addressed. 1999 ISBN 085883 521 5 viii + 172 pp.
D-94	Fundamentals of Austronesian Roots and Etymology Kempler Cohen, E.M. This work presents massive evidence that all wordbases in Proto-Austronesian and its early descendants were coined exclusively from CVC morphemes. All wordbases in the most common form, CVCVC, that have been analysed otherwise by other writers are here analysed as having been coined by merger of two CVC morphemes, i.e., by overlap of the final of the first one and the initial of the other so that those two (nearly-)identical consonants are expressed as one. It is seen that in every case each of the two morphemes thus identified is well evidenced also in other wordbases. It is also seen that there are only a few canonical forms other than CVCVC, each produced by a respective simple coining method. Also identified are various phonological processes that deleted or modified phonemes. An appendix provides analyses of over 3,700 reconstructed wordbases and some 800 attested ones. Another appendix indexes the reconstructions, showing the published source(s) for each; it thus serves as a dictionary which in itself is an invaluable resource for research. Yet another appendix lists the more than 200 CVC morphemes that figure in the analyses, and groups them into cognate sets. Anyone interested in the Austronesian family will find this volume to be of considerable interest. 1999 ISBN 085883 436 7 458 pp.
